A mysterious pack of rustlers attempt to raid the Marlowe ranch but they are driven off by the owner and his cowboys.

Dan Farris, the rustler's leader, poses as an honest rancher. He loves Betty, Marlowe's daughter. Betty loves Bob Ellis. The day after the raid it happens that both men call on her. She tells them that she likes them both but will make no selection until one of them will prove that he can capture the rustlers.

Bob spots two rustlers re-branding one of Marlowe's steers. He cautiously approaches and gets the drop on them. Farris then appears, unknown to Bob, and he pushes a gun against Bob's ribs, making him a prisoner. They take Bob to their cabin and tie him up.

Farris frames with two of his henchmen who flee when he and Betty appear. Farris picks up Bob's hat band. Betty then agrees to marry him though she feels then, more than ever, that her heart belongs to Bob.

By a clever trick, Bob escapes on the day set for the wedding. He overcomes Farris' henchmen, turns them over to the sheriff and breaks up the wedding. Betty marries him and Farris is placed under arrest.
